Subject: Microsoft in court

Dear Attorney General,

I am writing about the anti-trust case against Microsoft. I am writing to say I think they should be held responsible for their many documented illegal and/or unethical actions in a much more effective way than current information indicates is the case.

It is clear to those who know the field, that while professing to be technology leaders, Microsoft has stifled the development of software technology by their practices. Their actions against IBM's OS/2 operating system is one prime example.

That they should get away with what they have done with nothing more than the currently reported slap on the wrist is nothing less than a travesty that you would do well to act against. I strongly suggest further pressing the matter against them with vigor.

Sincerely,

Jim LaLone
